ean of Residence David Cobb an-ced his intention to resign from osition this coming June due to lans for a year long sabbatical from Phillips Academy.

r the past six years, Mr. Cobb erved as Dean of Residence, a ion he himself proposed to er Headmaster Theodore Sizer ears ago. Mr Sizer persuaded Cobb to take the job. Although Cobb claims he would have major implications: "The second- iculum will be perferred to decline the offer, he felt an overriding obligation to accept it.

This marks Mr. Cobb's seventeenth year at Phillips Academy and, although he has two remaining years on his contract, he decided he would forego another year as Dean of Residence. "He has done a remarkable job of establishing his position... effectively and with flair," remarked Headmaster Donald McNeinar.

The second option was to encourage the Lawrence detectives to continue the investigation by coming to Phillips Academy to "conduct a probably long investigation." The police now realized that many and perhaps only PA students were involved.

"Although they conceded that because of exiguous evidence, probably few if any prosecutions and no convictions would result, they felt certain that a tenacious investigation could present at least some the students with instructive if d legal hassles. Phillips Academy will now strictly enforce restrictions on Day Student parking, requiring those students to leave their cars in the currently designated places.

Dean of Residence Daivd Cobb decided to update the former system in order to improve safety and faculty convenience. In the past, although day students were assigned to parking areas by cluster, the school did not strictly enforce the rule.

Frequently, day students parked in placed reserved for faculty or clogged the streets by dangerously double parking, according to Cobb.

To correct these problems, Cobb has outlined a new procedure requiring that, in addition to registering their licence numbers, all day students must attach a blue P.A. sticker on the left rear bumper of their cars.

Cobb said he plans to patrol the student parking lots daily, to ensure that everyone using them is on the

BOY ST

It has recently come to our attention that certain members of the faculty have been secretly competing for the coveted title of Phillipian COVER-BOY. Our undercover reporters discovered several correspondances such as the one below.

MEMORANDUM

To: Lou Bernieri Date: 11 Nov 83

From: David Cobb

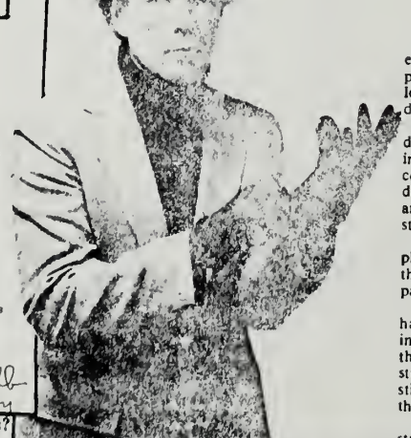

Subject: Cover Boy competition

I don't know if you or your agent have been sucking up to the Phillipian or what, ... but I note with considerable displeasure this move by you to supplant me as Cover boy of the Phillipian. Warning: as Defensive Coordinator, you'd better coordinate your own defenses, because my agent and I are launching an all-out campaign to restore me to my rightful place on the front page. I may not be much of a jock, but I'm a vicious competitor; you may be younger, but I'm still prettier.

One more thing: your intrusion of cheap sex (that bedroom smile on this week's front page) betrays an underestimation of the Phillipian's readership. It won't do you any good to resort to that. Independent surveys have shown that readers much prefer my wholesome, Boy-Next-Door, Colgate sort of smile. Like my name, it's somehow more Anglo-Saxon, more, well, American.

I eagerly pick up the gauntlet you have so brashly flung down. Just watch out!

Wouldn't You Rather Be at Andover? ('81)

Oh there's many a place where you can go to school;
Some are rather good, & some are not so bad!
And wherever you go, you'll surely find your spot,
So there's no need to feel sad! But...

Wouldn't you rather be at Andover?
Yes, of course you would!
Where the social life is fine!
Commons dining is sublime!
And the faculty are strictly WUNDERBAR!
Wouldn't you rather be at Andover?
Yes! of course I would!
If the Fates had wanted to hex me,
I might have been an EX-XY!
But my Guardian Angel took me by the hand,
And, instead of going to school just any old way,
I'm here at old P.A.!

Mr. Parsons organized various council members to conduct the elections for Junior, Lower, and Day Student Representatives. He stressed tance of confidentiality and agreed to discuss the issue when all clusters have elected their representatives.

Parsons outlined a series of proposals designed to combat "inefficiency in the way the school woorks."

Many's the time I've been mistaken and many times confused
Yes, and often felt forsaken and certainly misused
But, I'm alright, I'm alright
I'm just wearied to my bones
Still, you don't expect to be Bright and bon vivant
So far away from home
So far away from home.

Into each life some rain must fall,
Some days must be dark and dreary.
— Longfellow

Life, believe, is not a dream
So dark as sages say;
Oft a little morning rain
Foretells a pleasant day.
— Charlotte Bronte

I think I have wearied of living
this inane existence.
I find no meaning left in the harsh, cold, days —
the sleepless, empty nights.
I cannot find rest
for my thoughts follow me everywhere
They hide in wait for me
so that in my solitude they may pounce torturing my twisted mind beyond what is endurable.
If I take refuge in sleep
My thoughts invade my dreams
Penetrating their razor edged blades deep within my soul and there they remain forever surfacing
haunting my daily struggle waiting for me to slip, so that I can be broken.
So I continue
Plodding along the never ending paths
Fighting the wind that stings incessantly
I close my mind Push my thoughts deep within hoping to find a cure for this disease by forcing myself to endure patiently
And yet my hope is quickly fading
The door is slowly shutting ready to close out the outer world and close myself
inside my mind.
Desperately I grasp at the flicker of hope Pleading with God to let my patience last for just one more day.
Until someone from the outside can yank the closing door open wide
And flood the room with light.
Illuminating my mind, my soul
Ending the torture of the daily toil
Curing this disease that threatens to overcome Giving meaning back once again to this inane existence.

SENIOR SLAVE DAY

Morning Reflection:

I sat up early Tuesday morning
reading Sam Albert
When I couldn't sleep Blew my cigarette smoke into the post-dawn dusk.
Wishing I was as frank as he — and wanting to live out life's metaphors
like a poet.
But I, like a child, am trapped in the earth's similies.
Can't look past the sun
without burning my eyebrows
And can't lie sleeping in the dawn-time without neglecting my eyes.

with my hair down, so. What shall we do tomorrow?
What shall we ever do? The hot water

It is known that there are an infinite number of worlds, simply because there is an infinite amount of space for them to be in. However, not every one of them is inhabited. Therefore, there must be a finite number of inhabited worlds. Any finite number divided by infinity is nothing as makes no odds, so the average population of the Universe can be said to be zero. From this it follows that the population of the whole Universe is also zero, and that any people you may meet from time to time are merely products of a deranged imagination.

In some remote corner of the universe, poured out and glittering in innumerable solar systems, there once was a star on which clever animals invented knowledge. That was the haughtiest and most mendacious minute of "World History" — yet only a minute. After nature drew a few breaths the star grew cold, and the clever animals had to die.

It looked like one of those farmhousees you ride by in the country in the middle of the afternoon, with the chickens under the trees and the dogs asleep, and you know the only person in the house is the woman who has finished washing up the dishes and has swept the kitchen and has gone upstairs to lie down for half an hour and has pulled off her dress and has kicked off her shoes and is lying there on her back on the bed in the shadowy room with her eyes closed and a strand of her hair still matted on her forehead with the perspiration. She listens to the flies cruising around the room, then she listens to the motor getting real big out on the road, then it shrinks off into the distance and she listens to the flies. That was the kind of house it was.

There are plans I'll remember all my life
Though some have changed, some forever, not for better!

Ah, when I was a child . . .
We'd have to get up at 9:30 at night,
Half-hour 'fore we went to bed;
Go work in the mills 25 hours a day
And pay the mill owner tuppence a day to let us work there;
And when we got home we'd eat a bottle of cold poison
'n' while we were asleep our father would slash us in two with a bread knife and dance upon our graves!
And you tell that to kids today and they don't believe you!

God could have made the sun to rise without such splendor to the skies;
He could have made the sun to set without a glory greater yet.
He could have made the oceans roll without such music for the soul —

Like you once said:
"A true friendship,
Like a basic part of nature
Always returns to it's Kid, a fake smile is easier than A real tear —

But sadly never as Satisfying — Remember I'm Always here behind you
I hope the newly — come Sun brings A smile to rise up inside
You!
To the future!
With much love."
Thank You.

December Tuesdays, 6:00 pm
Five weeks after the fallback of the clocks
Night falls like brick:
Five twenty-six and the light has gone.
This night,
In its fall
Pulls down with it
Rain and a nervous breeze
That worries a plastic ball
Up to the brink of the gutter,
And bounces it down
To the street —
It is white, but can't carry light
Down with it. This ball
Is the only sign
Of children we know
Are now behind steamed windows
Fighting over bowls of hot soup,
And now its rolling,
Streetlamp to streetlamp,
Down the hill, down the course
Of the dark.

COMMENCEMENT

January 14, 1985; 7:40 a.m.

I awake to find that the heat escaping across my frosted window pane is being replaced by a constant stream of chilled air. Sitting up, I see my toes peering out from underneath my blanket. They are pink and swollen from the cold.

On a spark of insanity, I jump from my bed, my feet anticipating the cold, damp sensation of the linoleum below. I ignore their screams for mercy and pull on some pants whose peculiar scent recommends that they be washed — and soon. A sweater for my torso, shoes for my feet and I'm on the road. A Rel Phil movie — something about Martin Luther King — in A.V. Trudging across the snow covered tundra, I realize the likelihood of my fifth consecutive lateness. I stroll into A.V. #1 at 8:03 and choose a seat in the back, against the wall. I've got to finish some business I didn't get around to last night.

Unfortunately, the movie is holding my interest. I use every ounce of energy I have left to keep my eyes open. The Montgomery Bus Boycott, the "I Have A Dream" Speech — what a remarkable man. Just as the weight of my eyelids overcomes the weight of my will, I hear one sentence which draws me out of my semi-conscious state: "There can never be disappointment without love." In a matter of seconds, my fatigued and slightly deluded mind had arrived at the conclusion that this was one of the greatest truths in the realm of the human experience. I laughed softly to myself and waited anxiously for my 9:00 free. Coffee and donuts — my standard subsistence diet.

Having had more time to think about what had shot through my head on the morning of January 14, I realized that the notion of disappointment and love came as close as any one thing could to describing my Andover experience. I realized that for all the times I cursed this school, its bureaucracy and its unreasonable demands on my mind, I loved this place. I've spent the best four years of my life here — and maybe they wouldn't have been the best had it not been for all the hassles I had to endure.

Emotions of love and hate are things which every Andover student can share. For myself, they were inseperable — and had to be. Somewhere in the midst of my emotions, I learned how to give of myself, how to learn from others and how to have a good time along the way. So, I feel very fortunate to have engaged in this kind of "lovers quarrel" with Andover over the past four years, and I feel even more fortunate that you were here to do it with me.

As Brad Thomason put it, today is the tomorrow you worried about yesterday. Well, yesterday's gone and tomorrow we won't be around here anymore. So, let's enjoy this one while we can.
